

ITALY REPORTED ON MARCH

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

HEMPSTEAD county farmers should disregard press reports of a possible suspension of the Bankhead control law, and should obtain their allotment certificates from local committeemen Monday just as though there were no talk about abandoning the reduction law. No other course is safe—and it is unlikely that the government will penalize any man who obeys the law, or reward another man for breaking it.

Judge Kirby Dead; Basil Baker May Get Appointment

Death of Supreme Court Jurist Leaves Baker Unopposed

TO FILL OUT TERM

Unopposed Candidate Would Be Appointed After Primary, Report

LITTLE ROCK.—The death of Associate Justice William F. Kirby of the Arkansas Supreme Court leaves Basil Baker, Jonesboro attorney, unopposed for the office in the August 14th primary.

The Kirby and Baker race was the only one, since Justices Mehaffey and Humphreys are unopposed.

It is considered likely that Governor Futrell will appoint Baker to the vacancy after the primary.

Kirby Dies

LITTLE ROCK.—William F. Kirby, 67, associate justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court and former United States senator, died of a heart attack at 8:40 p. m. Thursday a few minutes after he was removed from his home to a hospital.

He had been ill several days at his home, 1013 West Third street, but members of his family and friends did not consider his condition serious until Thursday. The intense heat of the past few days aggravated his condition, which took a sudden turn for the worse.

His physician had him removed to a hospital but he succumbed within 10 minutes after he reached it.

He is survived by his wife, a son, William J. Kirby, a young attorney who has acted as his father's secretary several years; two brothers, Joe E. Kirby of Little Rock and Dr. H. W. Kirby of Georgetown, Col.; an aunt, Mrs. William Buchanan of Texarkana, and an uncle, L. E. Ferguson of California.

Judge Kirby served in both branches of the General Assembly when a young man, was attorney general from 1907 to 1909, and had served as an associate justice of the supreme court before being elected United States senator in 1916 to succeed James P. Clark, who died October 1, 1916.

He was succeeded in the Senate by the late T. H. Caraway in 1921 and was elected associate justice in 1926 to fill one of the new places on the bench created by an initiated amendment adopted in 1924.

He was again a candidate in the August 14 primary for another eight-year term and was opposed by Basil Baker, Jonesboro lawyer, who is left without opposition for the nomination.

Judge Kirby's term would have expired December 31. The supreme court recessed July 16 until September 17 and it is considered probable that Governor Futrell will appoint the Democratic nominee after the primary election to fill the unexpired term.

Long Fills Posts But N. O. Defiant

Crescent City Will Insist on Right to Hold Election

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—The state administration of Gov. O. K. Allen and Senator Huey P. Long and the New Orleans city government were thrown into a fresh dispute Thursday when Governor Allen announced appointment of two New Orleans assessors and city authorities refused to recognize the appointments.

Defeating Long Allen candidates, the New Orleans Old Regulars of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley last spring put their full slate of city assessors into office for four-year terms. One of these, John F. Tims of the Sixth assessing district, died several weeks ago, and another, Frank H. Moss of the Fourth district, was stricken with a fatal heart attack Wednesday night.

Thursday Senator Long, from the governor's office in Baton Rouge, made public a ruling from the attorney general that the governor had the right to fill the vacancies by direct appointment rather than call a special election. Allen immediately named two members of the Long or-

Arkansas Drouth Is Broken Friday by Scattered Rain

10-Minute Rain Is Reported Friday Noon at Prescott

NONE HERE AS YET

Heavy Clouds Over Hope, With Considerable Drop in Temperature

A 21-day drouth that has considerably damaged crops in Hempstead county remained unbroken at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon despite threatening rain clouds.

The temperature declined somewhat, however.

During the month of July only 1.23 inches of rain has fallen, according to figures released by the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment station.

July 1 the county was visited with .75 of an inch of precipitation. The following day .04 of an inch fell. The next and the last rainfall was on July 6 when 1-2 inch was recorded.

A slight shower starting at 12:45 p. m. Friday, fell in the city of Prescott. It lasted 10 or 15 minutes. A strong wind blew in with the rain, but no material damage resulted. It could not be learned whether other parts of Nevada county were visited with rain.

Drouth Is Broken

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The 60-day drouth was broken in some sections of Arkansas Friday as heavy showers fell.

The report of rain was scattered, but it fell fairly generally in the northwest and northeast portions of the state.

Temperatures dropped below the century mark for the first time in two weeks.

Rogers reported about one inch of rainfall. Bentonville got better than an inch and a quarter and Fayetteville more than an inch.

Fulton and Carroll counties which, with Benton and Washington, were pruned on the primary drouth relief list, were believed to have shared the rainfall.

Arkansas was the center of a heat wave Thursday from reports which placed Little Rock, with 102, and Fort Smith, with 106, high up on the heat list.

The fatalities in Arkansas have reached a total of 12.

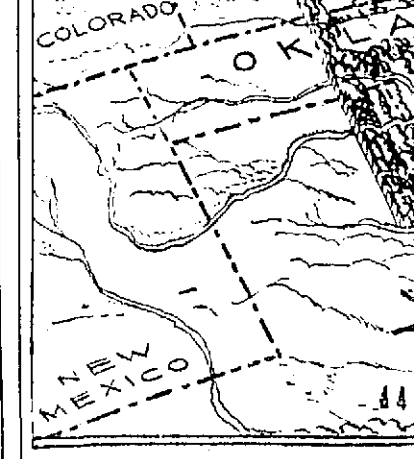

Sales Are Up

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Despite the record-breaking heat wave and drouth which paralyzed business over a wide area, the Dun and Bradstreet weekly review says that in the majority of leading cities retail sales are being maintained above the 1933 level by a range of 5 to 20 per cent.

An autogyro plane employing more than one motor and capable of carrying large loads of passengers, has been designed by a Philadelphia inventor.

Tree Belt 100 Miles Wide From Canada to Texas to Be Built by U.S. to Increase Rain

A magnificent belt of forest trees, 100 miles wide, and extending from the Canadian border to the Texas Panhandle—that is the vast conception now being studied by the Forest Service. It would aim at providing work as drouth relief, at reducing erosion, floods, and dust storms and at increasing rainfall. The trees would be planted in 100-yard north-and-south strips, with farm lands between, making a shelter belt 100 miles wide. It would take 10 or 12 years to complete the planting, and cost at least $75,000,000. Land for the 1300-mile forest would be either bought outright or rented with an option to buy later.

WASHINGTON.—(NEA)—All the tree planting done by the CCC thus far, and all the forestry projects of the states, would look like a brier tricked compared with the grandiose plan now being considered by the Forest Service. This is no less than the planting of a magnificent belt of forest trees, 100 miles wide, all the way from the Canadian border to the Texas Panhandle.

Cotton Reduction Must Be Enforced

Suspension of Bankhead Law Would Penalize the Faithful

LITTLE ROCK.—Termining the Bankhead cotton control act "a life saver to cotton growers," Charles G. Henry of Newport, general manager of the Mid-South Cotton Growers Association, Thursday urged farmers to live up to the regulations of the law and not to consider its annulment despite expected reduction of this year's cotton crop by the drouth.

He spoke before growers attending the fifth annual cotton classing school jointly by the Mid-South Association and the state Agricultural Extension Service.

"Pressure will be brought to bear on President Roosevelt calling for annulment of the act if a report to be made August 8 of the estimated cotton crop for this year shows that the drouth has reduced the estimated number of bales below the 10,400,000 maximum allowed by the act," he said.

"I am not in favor of annulment of the act regardless of the reduction caused by the drouth for two reasons. First, such action breaks faith with the grower who voluntarily reduced acreage last year in the federal restriction campaign, and at the same time allows the chiseler, or non-signer, who grew as much cotton as he pleased, to grow rich at the signer's expense.

"Second, annulment will destroy the price guarantee made growers through issuance of exemption certificates for each bale of cotton allotted them under the bill. If a grower, allotted 100 bales, only grows 75 bales, he receives exemption certificates for each bale which he failed to grow and he later may sell these."

Mr. Henry explained that the act calls for a price to be fixed by the government for redeeming exemption certificates for which cotton was not produced.

"The exemption certificates may be redeemed in cash by growers, by counties, by states or by whatever association or organization holds them," he said.

"For instance, I noticed the state of Texas at present is estimated to have a cotton crop below the bales allotted to it. If the state should fall 500,000 bales short of its allotted acreage, it could sell the certificates on each bale not produced. At present prices, a certificate would bring about $25 a bale."

Mr. Henry said that the banker, the cotton grower and the warehouse man would be glad to see the act annulled, as it would mean more cotton to make loans on, to buy and sell and to store.

He said that while complaints are

Cotton Allotment Certificates to Be Obtained Here

Farmers Must See Committeemen to Get Gin Tax Exemption

PLACES TO APPLY

Here Is List of Places Where Committeemen Will Meet

The cotton producers of Hempstead county must make application to their committeemen for allotment of cotton that can be ginned free of tax, says Frank R. Stanley, county agent.

It will be necessary for contract signers and nonsigners to make application. Only 10 days will be allowed for every farmer to make application for allotment. The committeemen will start to work Monday afternoon but will not call on each farmer, so it will be necessary for producers to see them. Mr. Stanley urges producers to do this at once so they can receive exemption certificates by ginning time.

Frank J. Hill, assistant in cotton adjustment, will be in charge of this work in Hempstead county.

List of committeemen and the places to make application for allotments are as follows:

J. R. White, Travis Bowden, R. F. Hunt, Nolan Leavelle, DeRoan Township—City Hall, Hope.

The area affected by the most tense situation in Europe since the outbreak of the World War, 20 years ago, is shown in the map above.

In Vienna, Austrian Chancellor Dollfuss was slain by Nazis.

State Expenditure Is Cut Two-Thirds

126 Millions for 1931 Session Reduced to 45 Millions

LITTLE ROCK.—Expenditures incident to carrying on various activities of the state government during the fiscal year ended June 30 were approximately a third of the expenditures for the year 1931-32, the last full year appropriations made by the 1931 legislature were in effect, it was shown in a compilation completed at the state comptroller's office Thursday.

The figures, taken from the state treasurer's records of warrants redeemed during the respective periods, showed redemptions of $41,067,775.82 for the year 1931-32, and $13,926,998.91 for 1933-34.

The greater part of the difference is represented by a decrease in expenditures for highway purposes. In 1931-32 the construction program still was in progress and expenditures that year for construction, maintenance and general administrative purposes totaled $24,839,369.88.

Expenditures for all highway purposes, including interest and bond payments made from the highway sinking fund, operation of toll bridges, county turnback and county highway bond and interest, totaled $30,237,756.13, compared with $5,329,634.23 for all

Foreign Minister Leftich Hurries to King's Summer Palace

BELGRADE, Yugo-Slavia.—(AP)—An unconfirmed report that Italian troops have already crossed the Austrian border at Villach caused great concern in official circles here late Friday.

Foreign Minister Leftich tried hastily to make contact with his king at the summer palace in Nishkabanja.

VIENNA, Austria.—(AP)—The situation in some sections of Austria approached anarchy Friday.

The country whose chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, was assassinated by the Nazis Wednesday, is wrecked by guerrilla warfare, pitched battles for possession of towns and railway lines, border skirmishes, hunger riots—and peace moves.

Fervent preparations were started by the government Friday for the defense of the capital city, as whole sections of the country are reported in a state of virtual anarchy.

The government, headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, claims it is rapidly gaining the upper hand in the trouble zone, and especially in official account declares the rebellion has been completely crushed.

An ominous feature of the situation, number killed since Thursday at the ward of 400, with thousands wounded.

An ominous feature of the situation is the fact that the highest Nazi leaders themselves no longer seem to be in control of their troops in the provinces.

An unconfirmed rumor said that eight who participated in the Dollfuss killing had been executed and that 30 are to be hanged Friday.

Von Papen to Austria

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler named the conservative Vice-chancellor Franz von Papen, to become minister to Austria Friday in what is regarded as an astute move to assure the world that Germany's attitude toward Austria is everything to be desired.

The propaganda ministry announced that von Papen had accepted and would report to Vienna without delay.

The move is likely to result in the appointment of Herman Wilhelm Goerring, Hitler's right-hand man in the June 30 revolt, and premier of Prussia, as the new vice-chancellor.

No New Troops

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—A government spokesman said Friday that no further Italian troops would be sent to the Austrian border for the present.

He said the reported concentration of German troops at the border is not regarded here with alarm, and on the contrary the Italian government is relieved by the belief that Germany would not only prevent Austrian legionnaires now in Germany from going into Austria but would prevent the escape into Germany of Austrian terrorists.

France, Britain Approve

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—A well informed foreign diplomat revealed Friday that the massing of Italian troops on the Austrian border was fully approved in advance by both France and Great Britain.

He explained it as the most practical means of preventing Germany and the countries of "the Little Entente" from starting a march.

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Your Size Controlled by the Pituitary Gland

It is now well established that your size depends to a considerable extent on the activities of your pituitary gland, that small ovoid body at the base of your skull. In other words, you are largely what your glands make you.

Since it is also well known that the glands control to a considerable extent the activities of the human body and the chemical changes that go on within it, some studies recently made in Boston of the metabolism or chemical change going on in the bodies of five midgets, a giant and a fat lady, are exceedingly interesting.

Dr. A. W. Rowe, who has made the studies, checked them also with studies made recently with an abnormally fat boy and two women with retarded physical development. All of the dwarfs were normal at birth, weighing about 7 pounds, but all of them failed to grow after the ages of six or eight. None of them seems to have matured sexually.

The fat lady had a father who weighed 235 pounds and a mother who weighed 400 pounds. She was the only child. She weighed 16 pounds at birth and at the time of the examination when she was 24 years old she weighed almost 400 pounds.

The giant had a number of tall ancestors, but none so tall as he was. He was of average size at birth. At the age of 25 however, he was seven feet and six inches tall, and weighed about 325 pounds.

Most of these people had a fairly good mentality. When the chemical changes going on in their bodies were studied, they were found to reflect to a considerable extent the condition of the glands.

The dwarfs tended to have low blood pressure. The fat people and the giants tended to have a higher blood pressure.

The temperature of the giant was slightly below normal at all times. Thus the chemical changes in the body reflected the physical condition associated with the abnormality.

This type of study establishes again the importance of the glands of the body as the regulating mechanism for its activities. We are what our glands make us.

New discoveries made in medicine are developing substitutes for glands which fail to function satisfactorily. Other techniques permit the removal surgically of portions of glands when there is overfunctioning of glands when there is overfunctioning.

Of the greatest importance, however, is having a clear understanding of the extent to which the thyroid gland, the parathyroids, the pituitary, the adrenal glands, and the pancreas are performing their work.

These measurements may be made and frequently yield information of the greatest value for controlling not only the size and shape of the body, but also for maintaining it in health.

Highly Unusual, But Satisfyingly Puzzling—New Ellery Queen Thriller Is An Ingenious Book

By BRUCE CATTON
Detective stories these days are of two kinds—those which are mathematical puzzles, pure and simple, with plot and characterization having not the remotest resemblance to anything ever seen in real life, and those which are actually of some consequence as novels aside from their carefully-devised problems.

The Ellery Queen books belong in the first group, and as long as you remember that they won't be disappointing in them. If anybody like Ellery Queen ever started detecting in real life the whole police force would leap on him as one man and beat him to death with sticks; but while his adventures are fantastically unreal, they are ingenious enough for the most exacting reader.

The newest one of Queen's vehicles is "The Chinese Orange Mystery" (Stokes; $2) and it's quite as intricate and complicated as its predecessors. It tells how a nameless stranger gets clubbed to death in a New York office; when they find him, all his clothes are on backward and all the furniture has been turned wrong-end to end.

This sets Mr. Queen off, and he does his usual job, emitting en route a lot of statistics about rare Chinese stamps and emerging, at last, with a neatly packaged solution which, I think, will

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Break a Child Habit by Rule of Thumb

A young mother wants to know what she'll do about four thumbs. Two belong to the baby and two to young Elizabeth, aged nearly three.

These thumbs have a habit of getting thoroughly massaged in their small owners' mouths. At least the baby's do. Elizabeth's only when she goes to sleep.

"My book," says this mother, "tells me to pin the baby's nightgown sleeves down over his hands, or to put on small mittens. How can I do that in this weather? He doesn't wear a nightgown or a dress and I haven't the heart to put things on his hands."

There is no quick or magic cure for thumb-sucking.

It is true, however, that the habit is formed in early infancy and this is the time patiently and persistently to discourage it as far as possible.

"Discouragers," as her book says, are all right, that is, taking means to keep the hands away from the face by lessening repeated gestures. Using long sleeves or mittens is recommended. Indeed it is advocated by the very best counselors.

But there are times, as in summer, when it is almost impossible to do this. And besides mothers are busy.

Other "discouragers" then must be used. Hands that are busy won't seek the mouth. Even a little baby's hands can be occupied by safe toys, rattles, little rubber dolls, and such things. Also he won't be so likely to suck his fingers if he is interested in people or things moving about him.

It is the lonely baby in the lonely cradle or cart or play pen with nothing to do but lie or sit, who is going to seek companionship in his thumb.

May Grow Out of It
Of course, when he is very little he will sleep most of the time. By the time he gets over his sleepy state he will be old enough to play with tiny toys and also to be interested in affairs about him.

If this baby continues to put his thumb in his mouth just before he drops off for a nap, I should not worry. The sky won't fall. Lots of babies do it and get over it and although it isn't a very admirable habit for a child to grow up to, few do grow up to it. The idea of breaking the baby is to prevent the habit from clinging.

No one wants a great big child looking dumb and queer standing about with his thumb where his tongue ought to be.

Keep Hands Occupied
Elizabeth is at the getting-over-it stage. She really should be over it—but well, she isn't yet. The cure can be hurried by giving her something to play with at bedtime. She can't be smothered or shocked out of it. The danger here is setting the habit by calling attention to it, or by diverting the habit into less admirable habits.

Habits are peculiar. Drastic methods are seldom successful. One mother made her child look in the glass every time. It might work with some children.

Something to do. This is the great secret of cure. Tired enough at bedtime to go right to sleep and to avoid loneliness during the day. The very busy child has very few bad habits as a rule.

surprise you greatly.

Another current thriller is "Out Went the Taper," by R. C. Ashby (MacMillan; $2). Here we have a young American vacationing with an English chum in a little town in Wales. He begins to run into ghosts by wholesale, and some of them turn out to be English gangsters—although others seem to be sure-enough ghosts—and before he is through he gets involved in a rather exciting murder plot. The whole story is pretty naive, but you may find a few gratifying shudders in it.

And He Was
The bus-driver was obliged to pull up very suddenly at the street-crossing, and in doing so grazed the side of a taxi. The taximan turned on the bus-driver and gave vent to a volume of vituperation and abuse, and as the bus-man sat smiling and unresponsive, kept it up until he was exhausted and could say no more. Then the busdriver, smiling, retorted: "I thought you'd be cross."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town, Maryland, and especially AMY JACKSON that she can make a success of her life. Amy has been her best friend until NOW—AMY JACKSON broke the engagement Jane had forced upon him and married AMY.

In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and sets out to make a large income. She has an affair with ROBERT THOMPSON, married, but tries to get away with him. He tries to get the expense of their child and contemptuously dismisses him. Amy takes the baby, named NANCY, promising never to reveal its parentage.

When America enters the World War, Jane enlists in the aviation corps and goes to a training camp in Texas. Her mother comes to stay with Amy and little NANCY. Amy confides to MARY JACKSON that she is expecting a child of her own.

Howard comes home for the Christmas holidays.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVII

THEY talked, Mary Jackson declared, every minute but never seemed to be tired. If Amy was in the kitchen, Howard was there, too, in the nearest chair, watching her when he was not allowed to help, and this last did not happen often. He was a house-husband, skillful with dish-mop and egg-beater.

"I don't know why you should be trusted with an airplane," said Amy, "I always understood they were fragile. You're the perfect geologist with his hammer when you get into the kitchen."

"It's your distrust in my ability that cramps my style. You think I'm going to break something, so of course I do. Power of suggestion."

"Ah, yes—the greater intellect controls the lesser."

"Not at all. It's sheer brute force acting on extreme sensitivity."

He would follow her, laughing, through the rest of the house, insisting that the dust could wait, that books needn't be put back on the shelves, that neatness was a vice of dandy grip and fatal results. Mary Jackson, busy, too, listened and smiled and sometimes joined in the argument, always, complained Howard, taking Amy's part. "This houseful of tidy women!" he lamented, "what can one poor man do against them? Even Nancy puts her toys away."

This nonsense banter went on so long as there was anybody within earshot. Alone, they were serious enough, and silent, too, holding to each other as if to fend off the coming separation.

THEY did not have a great deal of time alone for from that first night on every soul in Maryland seemed to want to see Howard, especially the college students and the younger men of the town. All the faculty wanted him for dinners or luncheons.

But he refused every invitation possible for him to refuse and when he had to accept he would come rushing home to Amy, angry at the wasted time. They were sure of only one hour together each day, and that they kept jealously, no matter how much he was pressed to give it elsewhere, the hour when she was accustomed to take her twilight walk. Now he walked with her slowly. She held his arm. They wrapped themselves in isolation. Sometimes they forgot even to speak to people they knew who passed on the path, but no one was offended. A glance at them extended their leave. As the end of Howard's leave drew near they stopped discussing the remote region of after the war, became practical. Amy promised to give up her music classes, to rest up, to take what she called a sure cure of herself even while she consented to it. "And don't try to save and scrimp too hard on money," Howard ordered. "There's enough, even if we're not millionaires. And there's—" he stopped.

"There's what?"

"There's no need of you pinching pennies. It worries me," he ended lamely. He had meant to say, "There's my insurance," but stopped in time.

"And you promise me to take care of yourself—teaching all those crazy youngsters to fly. Any one of them might put you in frightful danger. It's always in my mind."

"It needn't be. Believe me, I watch them. Oh Lord, if I only hadn't to be away from you now. But I've decided something. Amy, I'm coming home—at the time, it's only for a day. I've got to be with you then. A woman goes through too much—"

HE remembered Jane when Nancy was born. "It's not too much. It's a normal happening, you know. We all arrive by the same route. And afterward, it's so grand!"

"But you want me to come, don't you?"

"Of course I do, more than anything in the world. It makes the time nearer when I see you again—only till March."

"It seems as if I'd been here hardly a minute! Oh Amy, I'm no real soldier. A real soldier neither thinks nor feels. Some of the men love it. They eat up the drill and discipline. It's a welcome escape for them from their civilian life. They talk of wanting to go into the regular army when the war's over, and I listen to them and can't understand it. Maybe they'll change their minds when they get into actual fighting, but I don't know."

She pressed close to him. She did not want to talk about those other men. "I love you so, Howard," she said. "You're not sorry we're to have this child, now, are you?"

"Oh, no, no! It makes me happy beyond anything I ever imagined. If I could only be with you and watch out for you! You will be very careful, won't you? Have all the doctors and nurses and everything. It makes me feel helpless to be so far away. I worry so much about you."

"I worry about you, too—but that can't be helped. But there's one thing that troubles me, Howard—about Nancy. I don't know—it seems very unlikely, but—" what if Jane should want to take her again, when she knows we have a child of our own?"

"What made you think of that? Why should she want Nancy more than she did before?"

"Jane has queer ideas, she's not like anyone else."

"I DON'T believe she's queer enough to want to take on the responsibility of a youngster Nancy's age. And she couldn't do it without giving a reason. She'd know it would make people suspect that she's Nancy's real mother and she'd avoid that at any cost. She certainly hasn't shown any affection for Nancy, nor any interest either, since that first time. How did you get such a notion?"

"I don't know. There's no special reason for it. I've been hoping that she'd come on to see Miss Rosa before you left, and maybe we'd be able to find out, together, if she should take it into her head to do anything. She was to come sometime during the holidays, but she's not arrived so far or Mary would have spoken about it. Mary goes to Miss Rosa's every day or two, for meetings and things, and they're friendly, you know."

"Well, don't worry about it any more, darling. We'll ask Mother if Jane's coming, and if she is we'll see her and get a line on her. I'll deal with Miss Jane if she starts any funny business."

"It makes me more easy just to have talked about it. Honestly I don't know why I thought about it at all, except that somehow a child really your own seems—"

"vitaly important, terribly precious. And whenever I look at Nancy I begin wondering again if Jane could do without her, or whether she mightn't think this was a good time to get her back, that we wouldn't protest."

"But you wouldn't give Nancy back to her, would you?"

"I don't know. She is Nancy's mother, and if I believed she could feel about Nancy as I do toward our son—no, I don't know."

"It would be a pretty poor lookout for Nancy to be handed over to that neurotic egotist. I'd never consent to it, I can tell you that. Throwing her to the wolves, it seems to me." He was thoughtfully roused. "She's going to telephone Miss Rosa tonight as soon as we get home—no, we'll stop in on our way. She's been raging at me for not making a speech before her little band of hopeful knitters or bandage rollers or whatnot, and I'll say I came to smooth her down. I want this thing settled."

"You needn't be so defiant. I wouldn't give Nancy up to Jane unless I was sure that Jane would love her, really love her."

"Then Nancy's ours forever. Jane never loved anyone but herself and never will."

"Jane loved you," sprang into Amy's thoughts, but she did not utter it.

Storks Win First in Nine Attempts

Locals Overwhelm Two Transporters' Pitchers 12 to 7

The Storks sent 16 hits whistling past two southwestern Transporters' pitchers Thursday afternoon at Fair Park to win their first game in nine starts, 12 to 7.

Both teams scored in the first inning, Texarkana getting three, Hope retaliating with two runs.

The Stork's big inning was the fourth. The team batted around to score six runs. Ruby McClendon led the attack. He got four hits, including a triple, out of four trips to the plate.

McClendon batted in five runs and scored three more himself. In the eighth he tripled to clear the bases.

C. Schooley started the sixth inning rally with a single. Elliott sacrificed. Mallet reached first on Huddleston's error at shortstop. Russell singled, scored Schooley. Harrell followed with another single, scoring Mallet.

Reid walked, Cook drew a pass on balls. McClendon came through with a single to score Harrell and Reid.

After two were out, Riley hit a bouncer too hot to handle, scoring Cook and McClendon. C. Schooley at bat for the second time in the fourth, hit a grounder to third and was thrown out, ending the rally.

"The Storks' other four runs came in the eighth. With three on base McClendon tripled and then scored when a team mate brought him home with a single.

The league leaders played erratic baseball, making many misplays. The Storks drove Ernest Harris from the mound in the early innings and hammered Phillips for the remaining runs.

Atlanta comes here Sunday afternoon for a double-header. Manager Red McClendon Friday had not announced his pitching selections.

NEWS CHURCHES

First Baptist
Wallace R. Rogers, Pastor

Sunday will see the beginning of a series of evangelistic services in the First Baptist church with the pastor preaching and Claude Taylor leading the congregational singing. The first service of the series will be on the church lawn at 8 o'clock Sunday evening, with a 15 minute period of music starting at 7:45 and singing over the amplifying device to be used in the service.

The chorus choir will be used to aid in leading the congregational singing, and will be made up of at least 35 voices. If the leaders see the need of a larger choir arrangements will be made to care for it early next week. These services will be open to all people, and because of the fact that they are to be conducted in the open they will be very informal. Comfortable seats will be provided, and spotlight lights have already been placed at a distance from the congregation thus avoiding the discomfort of insects which so often gather under ordinary lights.

The pastor will preach Sunday evening from the subject "The Inescapable Jehovah." He will preach at the regular morning services which will be preceded by the Sunday school which opens at 9:45. The Baptist Young People's Union will meet at 7 o'clock Sunday evening and close at 7:45.

First Christian Church
The Rev. Guy D. Holt of Memphis, Tenn., will preach at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m. All members are requested to be present at both of these services. The public is cordially invited to hear Bro. Holt. He has served in Memphis for several years and is an excellent speaker.

Sunday school at 9:45 classes for all ages.

Junior Christian Endeavor at 5 p. m.

Christian Endeavor at 6:45 p. m.

FIRST METHODIST
E. Clifton Rule, Pastor
"Under God's Banners" will be the subject of the pastor's sermon at 10:55 o'clock Sunday morning. The choir will sing an anthem, "Praise Ye the Father," by Guion. Mrs. Rounton will be at the organ.

Attendance and interest in the open air service Sunday evening is growing. Next Sunday the subject of the pastor's sermon will be, "At the Judgment Seat." There will be congregational singing, led by Clifford Franks. The service begins at 8 o'clock.

The Church School meets at 9:45 o'clock Sunday morning.

The young people's groups meet in the evening at 7:15 o'clock.

Henry Ottot, head of the New Orleans branch of the state Auto License Bureau, was named to succeed Tims and state Representative J. E. Weber of New Orleans, who was defeated for an assessorship by Moss in last January's primary, was appointed to the Moss vacancy.

Mayor Walmsley was away from the city on vacation, but acting Mayor A. Miles Pratt said the two appointments would not be recognized and that special elections would be demanded. Court action to prevent the Long-Allen appointees from taking office was indicated.

President Henry Umbach of the Board of Assessors for the parish of Orleans declared the constitution prohibits the governor from making appointments to an elective office where the term has more than one year to run.

path of the proposed belt, or immediately leased with option to buy the wooded sections later. At least six, and probably more huge nurseries would have to be established, and a vast quantity of seed and seedlings provided.

provide valuable timber later.

Stud Old World Plans
The plan has not yet been approved, but study is being given to two very old similar programs in France and Russia. That in Russia was launched one 70 years ago in Czarist days to reclaim some of the worn out prairie lands.

That in France is 150 years old, and is said to have made a splendid pine forest out of useless sandy waste. So far there is nothing particularly new about the shelter belt proposal except its tremendous size.

The plan involves either renting or buying land in strips perhaps 100 yards wide, running north and south. The area between would be cultivated just as at present. But the alternate strips of woodland would create a forested area 100 miles wide, enough, it is felt, to influence weather and drainage conditions.

Cost Near $75,000,000
The forested areas would have to be fenced to keep out cattle and sheep while the tree were growing, and this work, with the planting itself, would be expected to furnish a great deal of needed employment to farmers of the region who have been impoverished by drought conditions.

It is estimated that from 10 to 12 years would be required to finish the job and it will cost at least $75,000,000. Part of this money would come out of the drought relief funds already appropriated. A great part of the millions of fence post needed could be furnished by the CCC, cut on forest projects were thinning of timber is in order.

No Equal in World
Such a belt of forest trees, 1200 miles long and 100 miles wide, would have no equal in the world. The size of the undertaking is indicated by Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association, who estimates that 200,000 miles of fencing would be required to encircle the new woodlands and that 200,000,000 fence posts would be needed.

The land would either be bought from farmers whose land lies in the

A moment later she said: "Yes, I'll go." Then two shots crashed out, and the girl, staggering into the house, fell on the floor and moaned: "Granny, he's killed me."

Premier Mussolini sent 48,000 soldiers to the border with orders to be ready for any contingency. His action was said by high Italian officials to be an affirmation to Germany that Italy is ready to protect Austrian independence.

The gendarmerie at Graz, in Styria, reported intercepting a message from a secret Nazi radio station broadcasting an appeal that Austria should call its cohorts to join Styria and other provinces in overthrowing the government.

Italy, France and Great Britain were said to be ready to do whatever was necessary to preserve Austrian integrity, but as believing that no armed intervention would be necessary.

Germany continued to insist that the Nazi government there had nothing to do with the putsch in which Dollfuss was killed.

The German border, which has been closed to Nazi refugees from Austria, was reopened on the ground that re-
